PREFACE

OF the hundred plates contained in this volume, ninety-five represent papyri of which the texts are printed or described in the third volume of Greek Papyri in the British Museum: Catalogue, with Texts. The papyri reproduced on the last five plates belong to a large group of documents from Aphrodito (the modern Kom Ishgau), which, though acquired at the same time as many of the papyri now published, form a distinct group and are reserved for separate publication.

The plates are arranged chronologically, and a numerical table is prefixed. It has been necessary to make some alterations in the arrangement since the 'Table of Papyri' in the text-volume was printed off, and consequently some of the numbers given there between 81 and 94 are incorrect. The table in the present volume shows the true references.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a form of Greek or Latin, on a fragment of papyrus. The text is arranged in several lines, with some characters appearing to be in a different script or dialect. A large, stylized initial letter 'D' is visible on the right side of the fragment.

Handwritten notes in the left margin of the top fragment, including a circular stamp.

Main body of handwritten Greek text on the top fragment, consisting of approximately 10 lines.

Vertical marginal notes on the left side of the bottom fragment, including the word 'ΕΡΩΤΗ'.

Main body of handwritten Greek text on the bottom fragment, consisting of approximately 8 lines.

Final lines of handwritten Greek text at the bottom of the fragment, ending with a large cross symbol.

Fragment of a papyrus scroll containing several lines of ancient Greek text. The text is written in a cursive hand and is partially obscured by a large, irregular brown stain that covers the right and central portions of the fragment. On the left side, there is a vertical column of text, possibly a list or a marginal note, which is also partially obscured by the stain. The fragment is mounted on a light-colored background.

PAPYRUS 1206.

B.C. 99.

Fragment of a papyrus scroll with Greek text. The text is written in a cursive hand and is partially obscured by a hole on the left side. The fragment is roughly rectangular with irregular, torn edges. The text is arranged in several lines, with some characters appearing to be in a different script or dialect than the main body of text. The fragment is mounted on a light-colored background.

PAPYRUS 1168 (4).

A.D. 44.

Fragmentary papyrus with two columns of Greek text. The left column contains approximately 25 lines of text, and the right column contains approximately 25 lines. The text is highly fragmentary due to the physical damage to the papyrus, with significant portions missing. The script is a cursive hand, likely from the 1st century AD. The fragments are arranged in two columns, with a vertical crease or tear separating them. The ink is dark, and the papyrus is aged and yellowed.

PAPYRUS 604 B.

Cols. 11-13.

A.D. 47.

Fragment of papyrus with handwritten text in Greek. The text is arranged in approximately 8 lines and is written in a cursive script. The fragment is rectangular with irregular, torn edges, particularly at the bottom. The ink is dark brown or black, and the papyrus is a light tan color with some darker spots.

Fragment of papyrus with handwritten text in Greek. The text is arranged in approximately 10 lines and is written in a cursive script. The fragment is rectangular with irregular, torn edges, particularly at the bottom. The ink is dark brown or black, and the papyrus is a light tan color with some darker spots.

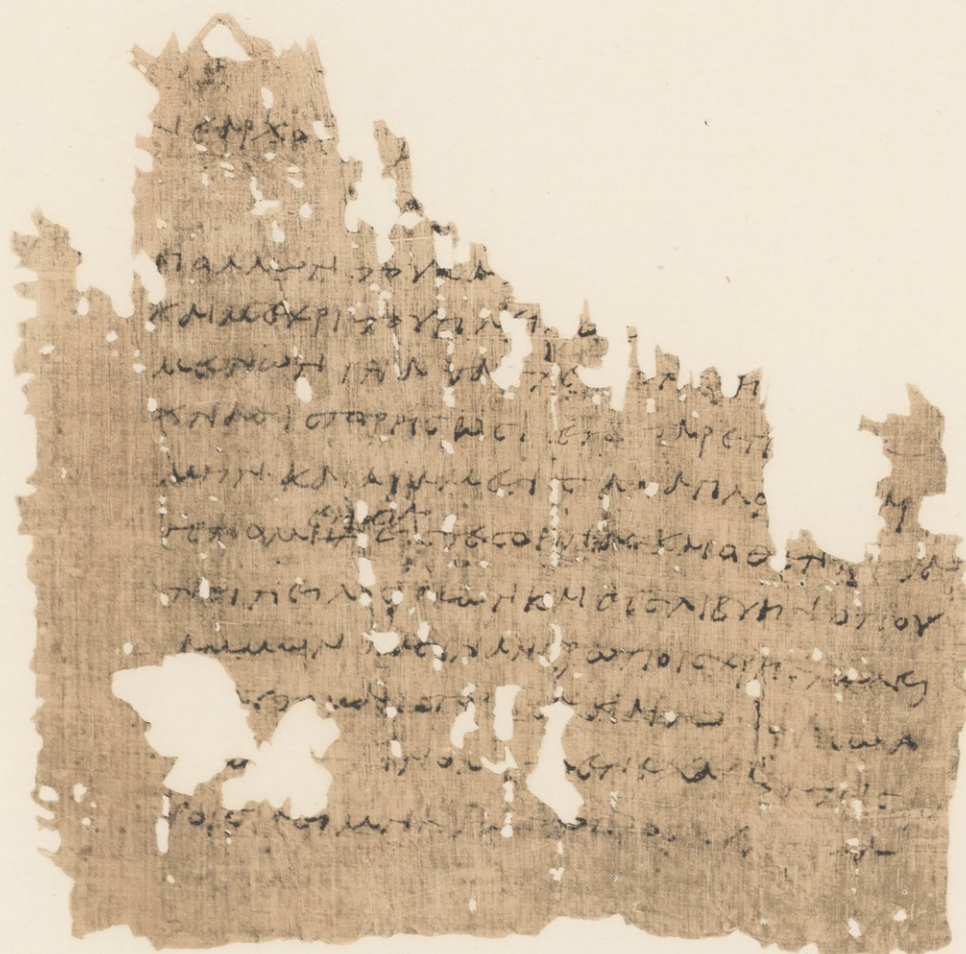

PAPYRUS 1213, a, b.

A.D. 65.

Fragment of a papyrus scroll with Greek text, showing significant damage and missing sections. The text is written in a cursive hand and includes several lines of script, some of which are partially obscured by the fragment's irregular edges.

PAPYRUS 897.

A.D. 84.

PAPYRUS 854.

1ST-2ND CENT.

Fragment of a papyrus scroll with Greek text in a cursive hand. The text is arranged in approximately 15 horizontal lines. The fragment is heavily damaged, with significant portions missing, particularly in the center and bottom. The ink is dark brown, and the papyrus fibers are clearly visible. Some words are written in a larger, bolder hand, possibly indicating headings or important terms. The text appears to be a list or a series of entries, with some lines starting with a large initial letter, possibly a Greek letter like Delta (Δ).

PAPYRUS 1177 (I).

A.D. 113.

Handwritten text in two columns on a fragment of papyrus. The script is an ancient cursive, likely Demotic or Hieroglyphic. The fragment is heavily damaged with numerous holes and tears. The text is arranged in approximately 20 lines per column. The left column begins with a large initial character, possibly a name or title. The right column contains a continuous flow of text, though some parts are obscured by damage. The overall appearance is that of an ancient document fragment.

PAPYRUS 1177 (3).

A.D. 113.

Fragment of a papyrus scroll containing Greek text, likely a fragment of a letter or document. The text is written in a cursive hand and is partially obscured by a large, irregular white stain or tear in the center of the fragment. The fragment is roughly rectangular with jagged edges, suggesting it was part of a larger sheet of papyrus.

PAPYRUS 1177 (5).

A.D. 113.

Fragmentary papyrus with two columns of Greek text. The text is written in a cursive hand and is significantly damaged, with large portions missing from the top and bottom edges. The left column contains approximately 15 lines of text, while the right column contains approximately 12 lines. The ink is dark brown, and the papyrus is a light tan color.

PAPYRUS 1223.

A.D. 121.

Fragment of a papyrus scroll containing several columns of ancient Greek text. The text is written in a cursive hand and is significantly damaged, with large portions missing and the remaining text appearing as dark ink on a brown, fibrous background. The script is dense and difficult to decipher due to the fragmentary nature of the document.

PAPYRUS 1159.

The script is difficult to decipher due to the fragmentary nature of the document.]

PAPYRUS 924.

A.D. 187-188.

Fragment of papyrus with handwritten Greek text. The text is arranged in several horizontal lines. The fragment is heavily damaged, with numerous holes and missing sections, particularly in the middle and lower portions. The text is written in a cursive hand typical of the Roman period. Some legible words include "ἐπιμαρτυροῦμαι" (I attest) and "ἀπὸ" (from).

PAPYRUS 1178 (1).

A.D. 194.

Fragment of a papyrus scroll with Greek text, showing significant damage and tear at the top edge. The text is written in a cursive hand and is partially obscured by the tear. The fragment is divided into two main sections by a vertical crease. The left section contains several lines of text, while the right section contains a longer passage. The text is difficult to decipher due to the damage and the cursive script.

PAPYRUS 932.

A.D. 211.

(Fragment of papyrus with handwritten text in a cursive script, likely Greek or Latin, showing several lines of text.)

PAPYRUS 933.

A.D. 211.

[Fragmentary Greek text on papyrus, likely a list or account of goods and prices. The text is written in a cursive hand and is significantly damaged and incomplete. It appears to be a list of items with associated quantities and prices, possibly in a dialect like Koine or Papyrographical Greek.]

[A large scribble or correction is visible at the top right of the fragment.]

Handwritten Greek text on a fragment of papyrus, likely a list or account. The text is arranged in approximately 20 horizontal lines. The script is a cursive form of ancient Greek. The fragment is irregularly shaped with significant damage and missing sections, particularly on the right side. The text appears to be a list of items or names, possibly related to a military or administrative record, given the context of the fragment's discovery.

Fragment of text from the adjacent page, visible on the right edge of the main fragment. It contains several lines of handwritten Greek characters, which are partially cut off by the edge of the fragment.

PAPYRUS 1164 (h).

A.D. 212.

Fragment of papyrus with faint Greek handwriting, possibly a list or account.

Fragment of papyrus with Greek handwriting, including the word 'προβόλον' (probolon) and 'εργασίαν' (ergasian).

Fragment of papyrus with Greek handwriting, including the word 'εργασίαν' (ergasian) and 'αδελφόν' (adelphon).

Fragment of papyrus with Greek handwriting, including the word 'εργασίαν' (ergasian) and 'αδελφόν' (adelphon).

Fragment of papyrus with Greek handwriting, including the word 'εργασίαν' (ergasian) and 'αδελφόν' (adelphon).

Fragment of papyrus with Greek handwriting, including the word 'εργασίαν' (ergasian) and 'αδελφόν' (adelphon).

PAPYRUS 851.

A.D. 216-219.

Fragment of a papyrus scroll with Greek text, showing significant damage and tear. The text is written in a cursive hand and is partially obscured by the physical condition of the fragment.

The image displays four fragments of ancient papyrus, likely from a single document, showing significant damage and fragmentation. The text is written in Greek and is arranged in two columns on each fragment. The fragments are heavily worn, with many holes and missing sections of the original surface. The text is difficult to decipher due to the damage and the fragmentary nature of the pieces. The fragments are arranged in two pairs, with the left pair showing more complete lines of text than the right pair.

PAPYRUS 984.

4TH CENT.

The image shows a fragment of ancient papyrus with several lines of handwritten Greek text. The text is written in a cursive script, likely from the 4th century AD. The fragment is irregularly shaped, with some parts missing, particularly on the left side. The text is arranged in approximately 15 lines, though some are partially obscured by the damage to the papyrus. The ink is dark, and the papyrus is a light brown color. The text appears to be a continuous passage, possibly a letter or a document fragment.

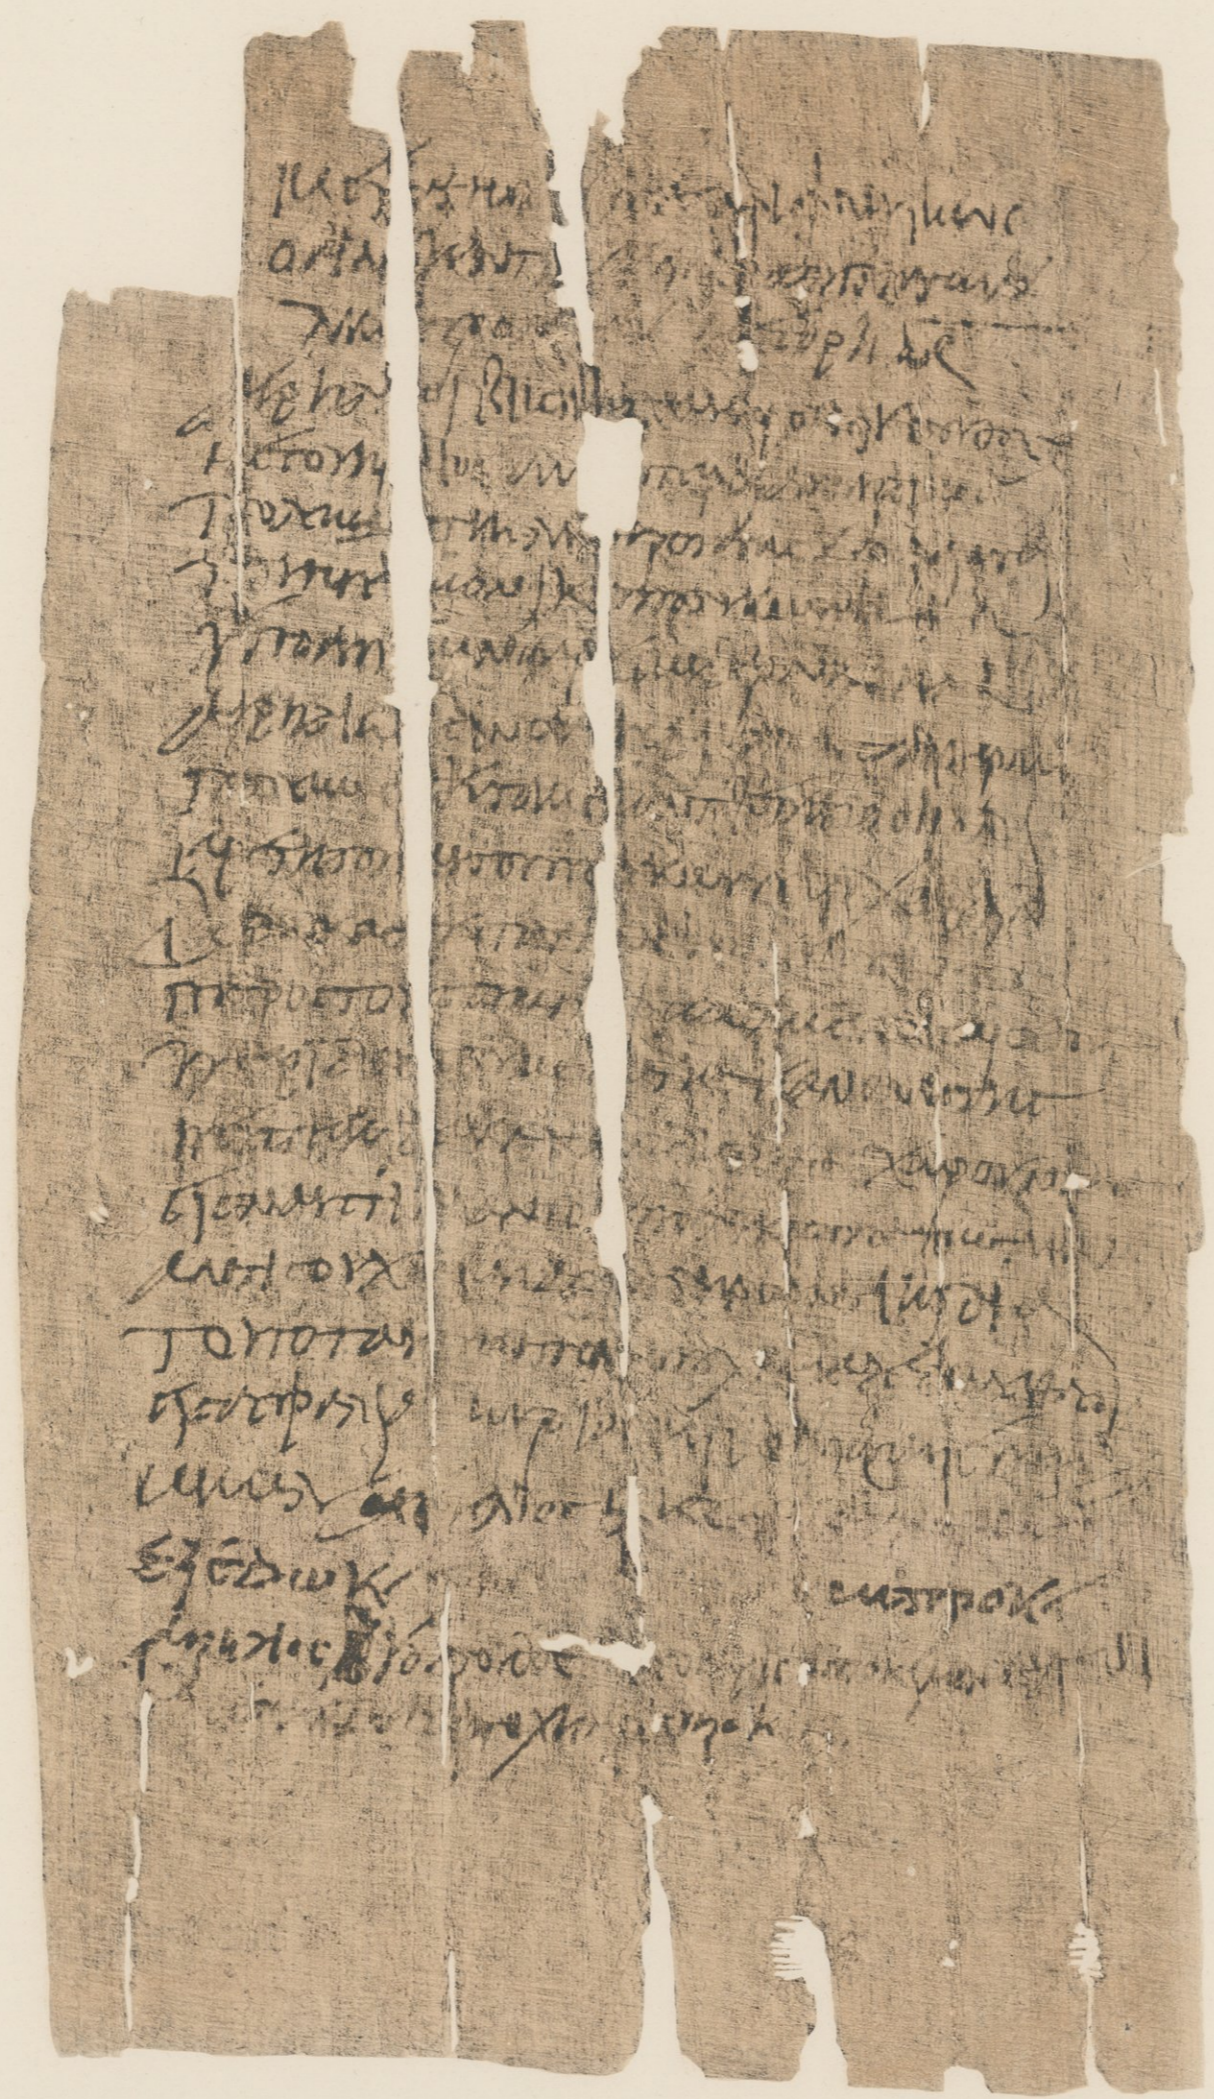

PAPYRUS 985.

4TH CENT.

The fragment of papyrus contains several lines of handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a form of Greek or Latin. The text is significantly obscured by large, irregular holes and tears, particularly along the bottom edge, which render much of the original content illegible. The remaining visible characters appear to be a mix of letters and symbols, possibly including Greek characters like alpha, beta, gamma, and delta, along with some decorative flourishes.

PAPYRUS 780.

A.D. 535.

Fragment of papyrus containing handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a form of Greek or Latin.

PAPYRUS 999.

A.D. 538.

Fragment of a papyrus scroll containing approximately 25 lines of handwritten text in an ancient script, likely Coptic. The text is written in dark ink on a light-colored, fibrous material. The fragment is irregularly shaped, with several jagged edges and a decorative, scalloped border at the bottom. The script is dense and appears to be a form of early medieval Egyptian writing.

PAPYRUS 776.

A.D. 552.

Fragment of papyrus containing two columns of ancient Greek text. The script is a cursive hand, likely from the 5th or 6th century AD. The text is heavily damaged and partially obscured by a large, irregular tear in the center of the fragment.

The first column (top) contains approximately 12 lines of text. The second column (bottom) contains approximately 10 lines of text. The characters are small and closely spaced, typical of ancient Greek papyrus documents.

PAPYRUS 1007 verso.

A.D. 558.

Fragmentary papyrus scroll containing several lines of Coptic text in a cursive script. The text is partially obscured by damage and fragmentation.

PAPYRUS 1326, a, b.

A.D. 576.

A.D. 583.

Fragment of papyrus with handwritten text in a cursive script, likely Greek or Latin. The text is heavily damaged and partially obscured by large holes and tears. The fragment is rectangular with irregular edges, particularly at the bottom where it is jagged and torn. The ink is dark, and the paper is aged and yellowish. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines. The first line is partially cut off at the top edge. The script is a compact cursive, characteristic of late antiquity or the early medieval period. The fragment is identified as Papyrus 774, dated A.D. 582.

PAPYRUS 774.

A.D. 582.

Fragment of papyrus with handwritten Greek text, showing several lines of script. The text is partially obscured by large, irregular holes, likely made by insects or damage. The fragment is rectangular with irregular edges, particularly at the bottom.

PAPYRUS 777.

A.D. 582.

Fragment of a papyrus scroll containing handwritten text in a cursive script, likely Greek or Latin. The text is arranged in several lines, with some characters appearing to be in a different script or dialect. The fragment is heavily damaged, with significant portions missing and the remaining text obscured by ink bleed-through and physical wear.
