THE TEMPLE OF BÎGEH

BY

AYLWARD M. BLACKMAN M. A.

LAYCOCK STUDENT OF EGYPTOLOGY AT WORCESTER COLLEGE, OXFORD,

LATE OXFORD UNIVERSITY NUBIAN RESEARCH SCHOLAR,

FORMERLY SCHOLAR OF QUEEN'S COLLEGE.

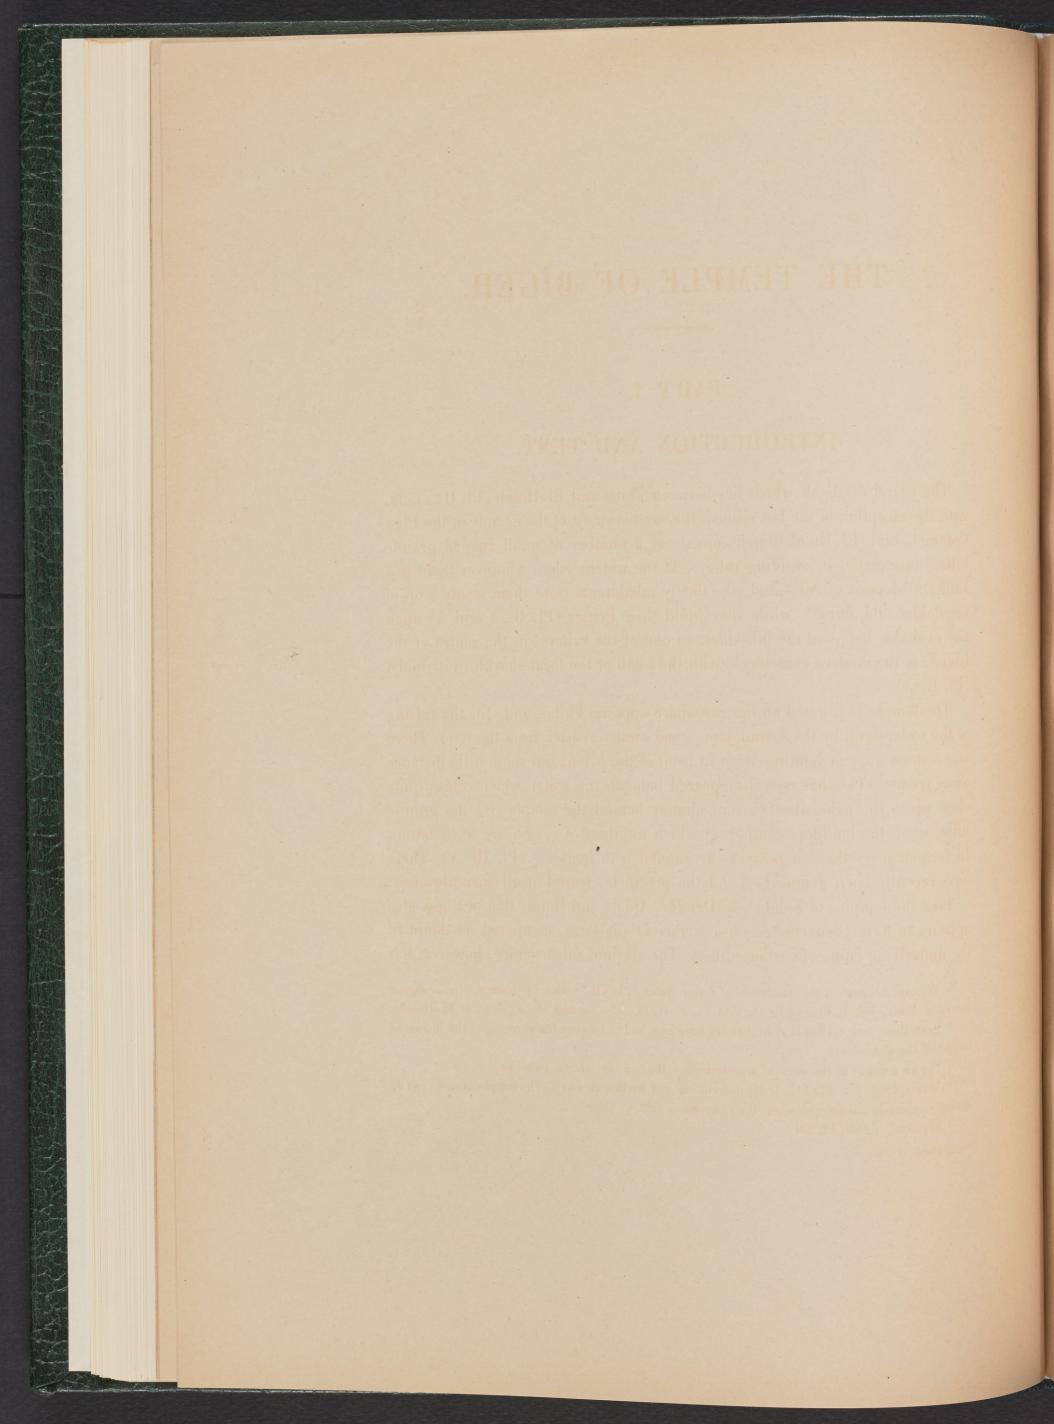

PREFACE.

The following record of the Temple of Bigeh was made in April and early May, 1910. Owing to the intense heat of the pile of granite boulders that forms the Island of Bigeh, the development of negatives proved very difficult, and although I managed to obtain ice from the Sudan Government's steamers at Shellal the results were not altogether satisfactory. I have been helped out of this difficulty however by my friend Dr. Junker of Vienna through whose friendly offices I obtained permission to publish in this volume the magnificent photographs of Bîgeh Temple belonging to the Königlichen Akademie der Wissenschaften at Berlin. I trust that in spite of the war both Dr. Junker and the Akademie will accept my warmest thanks for their generosity. But I have to thank Dr. Junker for other favours. He not only gave me much help while I was preparing my manuscript, but also read through the proofs, making several important suggestions and corrections. My best thanks are also due to Mr. Griffith for editing the Demotic graffiti (see p. 47), to Professor Hunt for editing the little Greek inscription on p. 49, and to Miss Porter for again furnishing me with full bibliographical particulars.

THE TEMPLE OF BÎGEH.

PART I.

INTRODUCTION AND TEXT.

The island of Bîgeh which lies between Philæ and El-Heseh (Pl. II, 1), is, with the exception of the last named, the southernmost of the islands in the First Cataract. Like El-Heseh Bîgeh consists of a number of small rugged granite hills (1) intersected by winding valleys. At the water's edge, wherever there is a sufficient deposit of Nile-mud, the thrifty inhabitants raise their scanty crop of vegetables and dura (2), while they build their houses (Pl. II, 2 and 4) upon any available ledge on the hill-sides. In one of the valleys, in the centre of the island, is the modern cemetery (3) with the tomb of the local sheykh in its midst (Pl. II, 3).

The temple is situated on the east shore opposite Philæ, and, till the raising of the water-level by the Aswan dam, stood some way back from the river. There was a stone quay or landing-stage in front of the pylon, but some little distance away from it. This has now disappeared beneath the water which comes quite close up to the pylon itself (4). Immediately behind the temple rise the granite hills, upon the boulders composing which numbers of graffiti are to be found. In former years the temple was surrounded with houses (5) (Pl. III, 1). These have recently been demolished and the precincts cleared of all encumbrances.

Like the temples of Kalabsheh, Dendûr, Ajûala and Halfa, that of Bîgeh also appears to have been erected on a terrace or platform, composed no doubt of the underlying ruins of earlier edifices. The original substructure, however, has been so enveloped in modern cement that it is now impossible to determine its exact nature (Pl. III, 2). Most of the temple has been destroyed, all that now remains being the gate-way of the pylon (1) and the greater part of the façade of the outer hall. This façade consists of four columns (2), adorned with the elaborate floral capitals usual in the Ptolemaic and early Roman periods, combined with a screen or curtain-wall of about half the height of the columns (3).

⁽²⁾ Even these poor attempts at husbandry have now had to be abandoned owing to the increased height of the water-level.

⁽³⁾ For an account of the ancient cemeteries see Reisner, op. cit., p. 102-111.

⁽⁴⁾ Weigall, op. cit., Pl. XII, 4. My description was written in 1910. The temple is now (1913) almost completely submerged when the reservoir is full.

What remains of the outer hall is the work of Ptolemy XIII, but the reliefs on the pylon gate-way were executed in the reign of Augustus, whose cartouches appear above the head of the officiating king in all the scenes, and also in the dedicatory inscriptions (e. g. p. 4; f) in this part of temple.

The scenes and inscriptions on the exterior walls of the pylon gate-way are executed in sunk relief (en creux), as are also those on the east (exterior) face of the screen, on the columns, and on the east jambs and interior walls of the door-way, of the outer hall.

The scenes and inscriptions on the interior walls of the pylon gate-way, on the west face of the screen, and on the west jambs of the door, of the outer hall, are in low relief.

In the centre resting on is a large disk with a winged scarab in the midst. This scarab grasps the symbol Q in its hind feet. Above the larger disk is a smaller one flanked with pendant uraei, and furnished with wings that droop down on either side of the larger disk. The uraeus on the north side wears the -crown of Lower Egypt, that on the south side the -crown of Upper Egypt. Laid transversely upon the wings near each uraeus is a -feather, the quill of which terminates in Q. At either end of the frieze is a winged uraeus whose body is coiled through a Q-symbol. The uraeus at the north end wears the -crown, and the one at the south end the -crown. Both snakes protect with their wings a cartouch of Ptolemy XIII. The cartouch in front of the northern snake is:

Between each cartouch and the central design is a vertical line of text, a and b.

THE ENTRANCE TO THE OUTER HALL. (Pls. XXIX-XL.)

The entrance to the outer hall divides in half the screen, or curtain-wall, which is built between the columns of the façade to shut off the hall from the open court⁽¹⁾ that lay between it and the pylon. This door like the usual Ptolemaic and Roman screen-door⁽²⁾, has no architrave either on the east or west side of the screen. Instead there is a slight projection at the top of either jamb in which, on the east face of the screen, is the upper socket for the door-pivot. These projections are surmounted by the ordinary palm-branch cornice (Pls. XXIX, XXXIV and XXXVI)⁽³⁾ which is continued throughout the interior of the doorway as well (Pls. XXXI, XXXII and XXXV). Beneath the whole length of the cornice and down the outer edge of the east face of the east jambs and the west face of the west jambs runs the roll or torus, ornamented with a pattern of binding (1) (Pls. XXIX, XXXIV and XXXVI).

On the edge of the jamb, outside the torus and continuing into the cornice, is a single papyrus stem upon the head of which sits Uto in the form of a cobra, wearing the y-crown of Lower Egypt . The snake entwines the stalk of the plant in its long coils.

THE INTERIOR OF THE DOORWAY.

(Pls. XXXI-XXXIII and XXXV.)

The walls are decorated with a cornice which, as we have already seen, is a continuation of the cornice of the jambs on the east face of the doorway. It is ornamented with the usual ribbing imitating palm-sticks, interspersed with the cartouches of Ptolemy XIII. Each cartouch rests on the real-symbol and is surmounted by M. The frieze, separated from the cornice by the torus, projects beyond the surface of the wall below and forms the rudimentary architrave, or projection, above the jambs on the west face of the doorway (see Pl. XXXVI, 1 and 2). These jambs unlike those on the east face of the doorway have no thickness or reveals, these being in the same plane as, and forming one with, the interior walls of the doorway. Both the north and south walls are decorated with eight rows of five repetitions of the group of symbols \frac{1}{2} (see Pls. XXXIII and XXXV).

THE DEMOTIC GRAFFITI OF BÎGEH BY F. LL. GRIFFITH.

The graffiti of the Bigeh temple cannot compare in interest with those of Philae. Although little remains of the temple, the survival of the main doorways has preserved a considerable number of graffiti, but they are short, illengraved, and in poor condition, and, until the exhaustive researches of the last few years, had not attracted the attention of any copyist. Upon the magnificent photographs of the scenes and hieroglyphic inscriptions made by the expedition of the Prussian Academy the demotic graffiti are shewn on a minute scale, and Mr. Blackman made squeezes of most. The following notes are all that I can gather from a brief study of these materials.

- No. 1. In the thickness of the south jamb of the pylon gate (see Pls. V and VI, 1) two or three small graffiti can be detected.
- No. 2. On the west face of the north jamb, between the heads of Isis and Horus (Pl. XIV) is a graffito of 7 or 8 short lines in bad condition.
- No. 3. On the west face of the south jamb about the figures of Isis and Horus, and in the band above the scene (Pl. XVII) are five graffiti. Over the crown of Horus is "The salutation of Hor (?) son of Pshenthof", badly engraved.

Graffito No. 3.

No. 4. In scene II on the east face of the screen wall (Pls. XXI-XXII and XXIX) are 4 longer lines, the first apparently reading: "His name remaineth here before Isis of Philae and Osiris of the Holy Place (i. e. Abaton)...".

No. 5. On the same wall over the head of the king in scene III (Pl. XXIII) is a graffito of 3 lines much injured. MINTERKI

No. 6. In scene I, on the east face of the north jamb of the entrance to the outer hall (Pl. XXIX) are four lines in front of the feet of the king. It begins with the name

"Esmet-o" and the groups moui, pwer, tpt are seen in the

GREEK INSCRIPTION.

This mutilated Greek graffito is engraved on the interior south wall of the pylon gate-way, below scene II. Professor A. S. Hunt of Queen's College, Oxford, very kindly made the following transcription from a wet squeeze, adding a translation and a few comments.

Rough lettering, 2-3 cent. A. D.

[L...] Παχων ιθ Year... Pachon 19, το προσκυνημα the obeisance Σμητυιοσπαεχ of Smetuispaekουι εκ πατρος . . . ? oui son of etc. ερταφις Φα... σεντιεισι ...

Ισιδι κα τοις συ ν to Isis and the associated ναοις θεοις επ Γαγ gods, for good luck $\alpha \mid \theta \omega$

II. 3 and 4. Σμητυιοσπαεκουι is, I suppose, all one name as εκ πατρος follows, Φα... being the grandfather. The $\alpha \varepsilon$ before now could be read $\alpha \theta$ or $\lambda \varepsilon$.

Il. 7 and 8. Φιλων looks like Philæ, but I cannot read έπ or ἀπὸ before it.

Perhaps we should read $[s \Sigma \mid \varepsilon \nu \sigma \mu \eta \tau \dots \sigma \mid s \langle \Sigma \rangle]^{8} \varepsilon \nu \sigma \mu \eta \tau \dots, \Sigma \varepsilon \nu$ being the common fem. prefix.

1. 10. Ka after Ισιδε of course means καί, but there has been some correction, for the ι apparently has got left out.

II. 11 and 12. $\varepsilon\pi$ $\alpha\gamma\alpha\theta\omega = \dot{\alpha}\gamma\alpha\theta\tilde{\eta}$ $\tau\dot{\nu}\chi\eta$, i. e. «bonis auspiciis».
